In August 1939 Tarski traveled to the United States to attend a congress of the Unity of Science movement (see Vienna Circle). World War II broke out soon after that, leaving Tarski no option but to stay in the States. He spent the war years separated from his family, forced to remain in Poland. In this period he held several temporary university positions, at Harvard University, the City of New York, and the University of California at Berkeley. The circumstances of Tarski's 1930 visit to Vienna are recounted in Poland and the Vienna Circle, Chapter XII in Karl Menger, Reminiscences of the Vienna Circle and the Mathematical Colloquium. Dordrecht: Kluwer 1994.

The significance of Tarski's work on metamathematics and semantics for the Vienna Circle, and especially for Rudolf Carnap, a leading member of the circle, should not be underestimated. Tarski visited Vienna in 1930 and again in 1935; his conversations there with Carnap were major stimuli for the development of the latter's theory of pure syntax and, later, his adoption of a semantical
